NAOMI WATTS

The Prada dress Naomi, 47, wore to the Tiffany & Co. Blue Book Gala April 15 was doubly flattering — vertical pleats lengthened her frame while an embellished belt flaunted her tiny waist.

Pleats on top, pleats on the bottom, and flowers in between! Nicole's gown was pretty busy, so she kept hair and makeup simple. Smart!

SARAH JESSICA PARKER

For a gala in NYC on April 11, Sarah Jessica's dress was big on feminine frills including lace and pleats — but her dark-lined eyes added a bit of edge to her look.

The Royals

Secrets Revealed in New Book

Author Christopher Andersen is spilling royal family secrets in his new book Game of Crowns: Elizabeth, Camilla, Kate, and the Throne. One of the book's biggest surprises? Prince Charles had a longtime crush on singer-actress Barbra Streisand! "He was so smitten with her," Andersen confides to Closer. But their first meeting, in 1974, wasn't exactly the stuff of fairy tales. "That was awkward, even by Charles' standards," writes Andersen, noting that Charles, 67, said Barbra "appeared to be rather nervous and kept asking me endless questions." Camilla Parker Bowles, on the other hand, was unfazed by Charles' standing. "She loved being a royal mistress," Andersen writes in his book, adding, "If there hadn't been a Camilla, Princess Diana would probably still be alive and happily married to Charles."

Michael Strahan

Morning TV Shake-Up

AFTER FOUR years sitting alongside Kelly Ripa on Live With Kelly and Michael, Michael Strahan is hitting the road for ABC's other a.m. show Good Morning America. "Kelly has been an unbelievable partner," said the former pro football player, 44. But an ABC insider confides to Closer that "Kelly was blindsided" by the news. The 45-year-old took time off the show, which she's hosted since 2001, after the announcement.

Michael calls his departure from Live "bittersweet."

HELLOS & GOODBYES

● MONKEE BUSINESS

That was then, this is now. And for Good Times!, the band's first album in 20 years, the Monkees have mixed a little of each — with new songs from the likes of Oasis' Noel Gallagher and tunes from the Prefab Four vaults. "We found these old unfinished tracks [from] Harry Nilsson and Carole King and Neil Diamond," said singer Micky Dolenz, 71. Why were they unfinished? "There was no more need. [We] were off the air!"

● FULL SWING

Everywhere you look, everywhere a book. While other celebs have written children's tomes recently, Full House's Dave Coulier, 56, knows his will be more notable. With the voices of John Stamos and other House mates, The Adventures of Jimmy Buger (yes, it rhymes with sugar) has tunes embedded throughout for many a sing-along. "I didn't want to write kiddie songs," said Dave. "It's jazz and blues and music kids aren't exposed to."

● BABY BOOM

Seconds, anyone? On April 18, Vinyl's Olivia Wilde, 32, announced via Instagram she and fiancé Jason Sudeikis, 40, are expecting a playmate for their 2-year-old, Otis. Also, Eva Mendes, 42, and Ryan Gosling, 35, revealed they await child No. 2. Ditto Blake

Lively, 28, and her Deadpool husband Ryan Reynolds, 39, along with NCIS: Los Angeles star Daniela Ruah, 32, and hubby David Olsen, the brother of her co-star Eric Christian Olsen.

● TRICKY ROLL

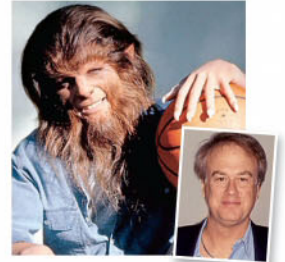

You'd think he wouldn't have trouble sounding presidential. But even after playing House of Cards' chief exec Frank Underwood, Kevin Spacey, 56, admitted getting the essence of Richard Nixon for the biopic Elvis & Nixon was a "challenge." Fortunately, the late president was known to tape a conversation or two to help him. "I came away feeling he swore in private more than any other human being."

● OVERDUE BILL

Out with Old Hickory and in with the new. On April 20, the U.S. Treasury announced abolitionist hero Harriet Tubman will replace Andrew Jackson on the $20 bill...instead of the 10 spot's Alexander Hamilton as previously thought. Credit for that may go to the smash Broadway hit Hamilton, which creator Lin-Manuel Miranda, 36, thinks is "crazy." But "he put Lady Liberty on the earliest U.S. currency — before all of y'all. So I think he'd be thrilled [about her]."

● FAREWELLS

The gift baskets will seem a little empty. On April 11, Richard K. Ransom, the founder of Hickory Farms, passed away at age 96. Also, Rod Daniel (above), who directed the Michael J. Fox hit Teen Wolf, died on April 16. He was 73. On April 20, Joanie Laurer, better known as the wrestler and reality star Chyna, died at 45. Finally, on April 21, 007 fans were shaken and stirred. Guy Hamilton, the director of Goldfinger, passed at 93.

Turning in Her Badge and Gun: Stana Katic

Detective Kate Beckett has resigned. Stana Katic, 37, announced April 18 she's not returning to Castle. She didn't state her reasons but said, "rather than distract from what was an amazing experience, I would just like to say that I'm very grateful to ABC for giving me the opportunity to be a part of a much-beloved show. Thank you to the fans."

Susan Sarandon says she's "open" to dating and is relying on NYC to help. "The serendipity is just so thick there."

Tina Fey says, because of the habits of her daughter and her dog, her movie life is mostly "old movies and pee."

Bruce Springsteen helped out in a proposal during a performance of "I Wanna Marry You" at his Baltimore gig on April 20.

THE TRUTH ABOUT Harrison Ford

INSIDE THE PRIVATE LIFE OF HOLLYWOOD'S
MOST MYSTERIOUS SEX SYMBOL

PHOTOS: CLOCKWISE FROM BOTTOM LEFT: R/R; GETTY (2); PACIFIC COAST NEWS; GETTY

Dressed in a suit and tie for the occasion, Harrison Ford was stopped by a camera crew as he walked the red carpet at London's Leicester Square. "Is the Force with you?" a reporter at the U.K. premiere of Star Wars: The Force Awakens asked him. Harrison paused and his eyes flashed devilishly. "I'm forcing myself," he confided, smiling his familiar Cheshire grin.

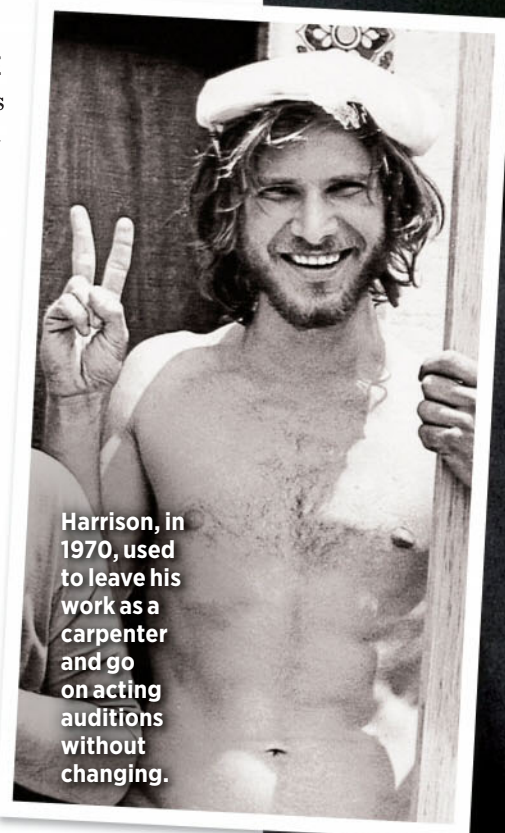

Harrison was teasing, but he was also telling the truth. It's been 38 years since he became the breakout star of the original Star Wars films, and he's since headlined some of the biggest box office hits in history and amassed an estimated $210 million personal fortune.

Yet this Hollywood heartthrob tends to avoid the limelight and is fiercely protective of his private life. Closer talked to friends, family and colleagues of Harrison's, who reveal that offscreen, the actor is humble, down-to-earth, head over heels in love with his wife (Supergirl actress Calista Flockhart) and has, more than once, served as a real-life hero. His colleagues praise him as "professional" and "hardworking" on the set — yet the most important part of Harrison's life is the time he lives privately with Calista, 51, and their 15-year-old old son, Liam.

LEADING MAN

Harrison met the actress, his third wife, in 2002 and, according to an insider, they still go on "weekly date nights," to romantic spots like the sushi joint Kat-suya in LA's Brentwood neigh-

Harrison, in 1970, used to leave his work as a carpenter and go on acting auditions without changing.

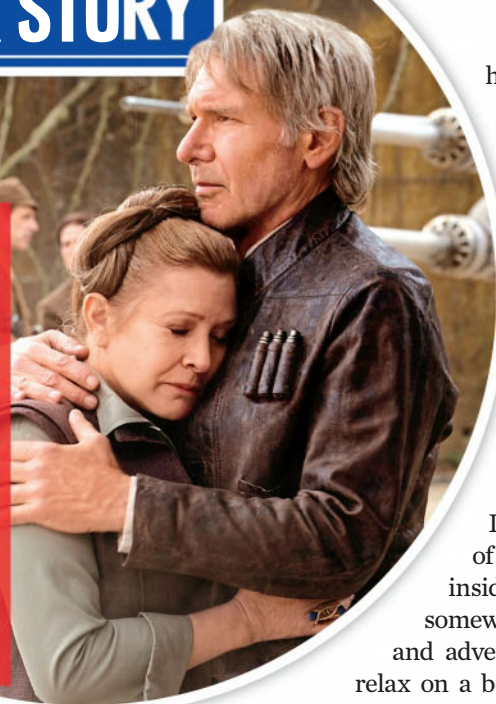

HAPPIER THAN EVER

“I am somehow extraordinarily lucky, for a guy with [bad] luck. I have people around me that sustain me. That’s enough.”

OLD FRIEND

Harrison, with Carrie Fisher, is intrigued by revisiting his early roles. He's agreed to star in sequels to Indiana Jones and 1982's Blade Runner.

borhood, and Via Veneto, an Italian eatery in Santa Monica. The couple, who married in 2010, are also frequent guests at Ford's Filling Station, a gastropub in downtown LA owned by his son Ben Ford (from his first marriage). "He loves barbecue," Ben, a chef, tells Closer.

But date nights are even sweeter for the couple when they are away from home — and thanks to Harrison's love of flying, they travel often. "Harrison laughs and says too much Southern California sun softens the brain, so they get away every chance they can," shares a pal, who reveals the couple recently jetted to the Galapagos Islands, off the coast of Ecuador. Adds the insider, "They'd rather go somewhere that's rugged and adventurous, rather than relax on a beach somewhere." In fact, last October, Harrison and Calista and a group of his aviator pals flew to northern Idaho for some gourmet back-country camping — complete with fine wine and catered food!

TO THE RESCUE

One of the couple's favorite places to escape to is Harrison's 800-acre ranch near Jackson, Wyo. The actor, who worked as a professional carpenter when he first arrived in LA in the 1960s, built much of the expansive home himself. "Harrison can go there and work with his hands doing fix-up projects, while Calista can cook — they don't have any hired help when they're staying there," explains the pal, who adds, "Harrison even does the dishes after dinner."

But when he's not playing house, Harrison embodies the derring-do of Indiana Jones. He still rides motorcycles, flies helicopters and, as a self-taught carpenter, he enjoys working in his woodshop.

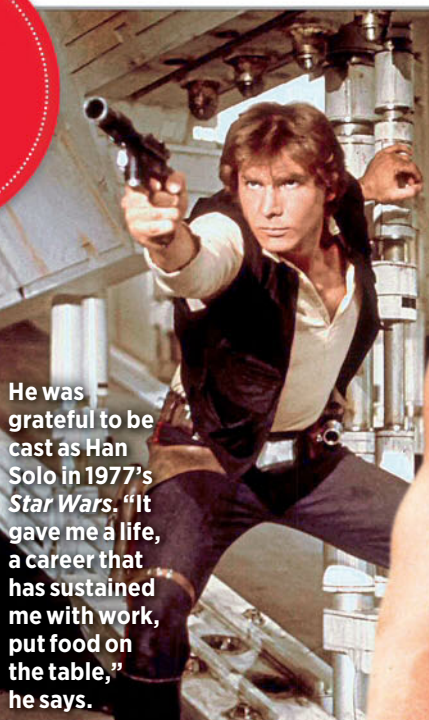

There were rumors that Calista forbade him to fly again after a mechanical malfunction forced him to crash a plane on a Venice, Calif., golf course in 2015. He still flies, and in the past, he's even completed a handful of rescue missions in Wyoming. (In 2000, he rescued a hiker, and in 2001, found a lost Boy Scout in Yellowstone National Park.)

The truth is, flying is "the family's major pastime," says a source,

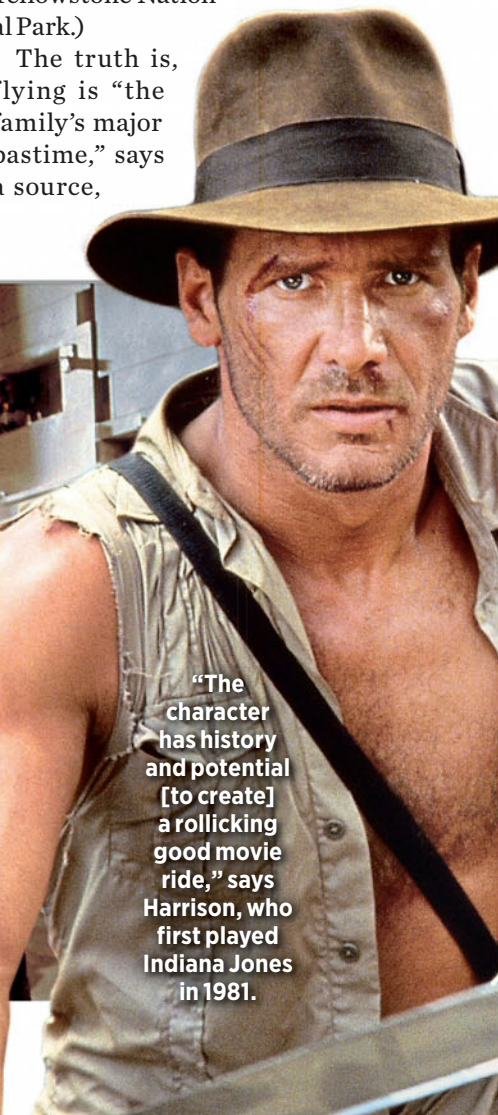

King of the Screen

He was grateful to be cast as Han Solo in 1977's Star Wars. "It gave me a life, a career that has sustained me with work, put food on the table," he says.

"The character has history and potential [to create] a rollicking good movie ride," says Harrison, who first played Indiana Jones in 1981.

who notes that Liam, the son Calista adopted in 2001, often joins them on their adventures. "Liam was about 6 or 8 months old when I met him and Calista. We have been together ever since," says Harrison, who calls his youngest son "an unexpected joy."

BETTER WITH AGE

There's no doubt Harrison, who has expressed regret over being an absentee father and husband in his younger years, has "become a great dad over time — funny, loving, comforting," says the insider. As the actor's aged, he's developed closer relationships with his four adult children — Ben, 49, Willard, 46, Malcolm, 28, and his only daughter, Georgia, 26 — from his previous two marriages. "I've learned a lot from my relationships, and I have learned a lot from my kids. I think I have made some progress," admits Harrison, who was married for 15 years to Mary Marquardt, his college sweetheart, followed by a 21-year marriage to E.T. screenwriter er Melissa Mathison, who died from cancer in 2015. "It crushed him," the pal says of Melissa's passing. "It was a deep, deep loss for Harrison."

The actor has also struggled emotionally with his daughter Georgia's epilepsy, something she only recently publicly revealed. "I admire her perseverance, her talent, her strength," the actor tearfully shared. "She's my hero." Ben says his father's support of Georgia's decision to reveal her illness is no surprise. "He's given us room to experience life and to live it, like normal people," explains Ben.

"Romantic love is one of the most exciting and fulfilling kinds of love.... There's potential for it at any stage of your life."

And while it's hard to believe that Han Solo is now a grandfather — it's true. "He's a really cool grandpa!" attests Ben. Yet even as he's emotionally matured into a more loving and contented family man in the past decades, Harrison, like his beloved action characters, seems impervious to physical age. "He has a use-it-or-lose-it mentality," says the pal, who reveals the star works out with a trainer and bikes; he also plays tennis and hikes to stay fit. As for still being considered a sex symbol at 73? "I never feel sexy," he insists. "I've got a completely imbalanced, irregular face and a nose that's been broken three or four times."

Yet in a world of too-perfect movie stars, Harrison stands out as a real man. "He's America's Sweetheart in male form," says Brad Duke, author of Harrison Ford: The Films. "There's no other one like him."

— Reporting by Amanda Champagne-Meadows

▲ Harrison (here with Kelly McGillis) proved that he could be tough yet tender in 1985's Witness, which earned him his sole Academy Award nomination for Best Actor.

In 1993, The Fugitive, a movie reboot of the popular 1960s TV show, was a surprise hit. Recently, there has been buzz about Harrison returning to play Dr. Richard Kimble in a new film sequel.

JESSICA LANGE

Back on Top at 67!

IT'S BEEN A LONG JOURNEY TO HAPPINESS FOR THE TWO-TIME OSCAR WINNER

Jessica Lange has often played characters battling mental illnesses, from the institutionalized actress in 1982's Frances to an unbalanced military mom in 1994's Blue Sky (which won her a Best Actress Oscar) to her quartet of crazies on TV's American Horror Story. In real life, the 67-year-old star has struggled with depression. "I had really tremendous mood swings, and still do," says Jessica. "Though my dark side is dormant right now, it continues to play a big role in whatever capacity I have to be creative."

These days, Jessica has a lot to smile about: Riding a wave of AHS acclaim, she's back on her beloved Broadway as the matriarch in Eugene O'Neill's Long Day's Journey Into Night. And after her turbulent romance with playwright Sam Shepard ended in 2009, she's "very much single and happy," says the friend. "She spends time with her friends and her kids and grandkids, who adore her as much as she adores them."

Jessica's older daughter, Shura, from her relationship with dancer-choreographer Mikhail Baryshnikov, has two girls of her own now. "They come to visit Jessica in New York often, and she lives for those days," says an insider. "She loves reading to them."

Mikhail and Jessica, who split in 1982, "enjoy each other's company now more than ever," says the insider. "It seemed like the enormity of their careers swallowed them whole back when they were a couple, but now they're both older and wiser."

She's also on good terms with Sam, with whom she has a grown daughter, Hannah, and son, Walker. "Jessica hasn't written Sam out of her life," the insider notes. "She still considers him family."

Over the course of 27 years together, the couple certainly had their share of ups and downs. "They loved the hardest and fought the hardest," says the insider. Sam's drinking — he sobered up in the '90s but has been arrested twice since 2009 for drunk driving (the charges were dropped on the second arrest) — complicated matters. "It was a lot for Jessica to deal with," the insider says. "But Sam will always be her true love."

Following a fallow period in her career — "She was saying, 'Are they putting me out to pasture?'" the insider shares — she's come roaring back with AHS, Long Day's Journey and a role opposite Shirley MacLaine in the upcoming film Wild Oats. An actress making a comeback in her 60s is "rare and speaks to her protean ability to change with the times," says WOR film critic Joe Neumaier.

And the times are good for Jessica lately. "She's really focusing on how the rest of her life is going to be," says the insider. "And she's proving that a woman her age can still knock 'em dead."

She won her first Oscar for 1982's Tootsie...

...and two Emmys for American Horror Story.

"I regret those times when I've chosen the dark side. I've wasted enough time not being happy."

THE LOVES OF HER LIFE

MIKHAIL BARYSHNIKOV "They're more like old friends than former lovers now," says an insider of the couple, who were together from 1976 to '82 and share daughter Shura.

SAM SHEPARD "No man I've met compares to Sam in terms of maleness," Jessica said about her companion of 27 years.

HER KIDS Shura, 35, teaches dance in Rhode Island; Hannah, 30, is an arts administrator in upstate New York; and Walker, 28, plays fiddle and banjo with the Brooklyn, N.Y.-based Down Hill Strugglers.

"Family is not an important thing — it's everything," says Michael, who despite his illness puts his loved ones first. "I love my family and my work. That's what happiness is."

Working to find a cure for Parkinson's has been "an amazing ride," says Michael.

Square Garden.) As routine physical activities become more challenging for Michael, Tracy has been there every step of the way. Says the insider, "She's having to do more everyday things for him, but she is happy to do them."

Another secret to Michael's success? Keeping one foot in show business. With the exception of his 2013–2014 sitcom The Michael J. Fox Show, over the past decade he's limited his commitments, opting for voice work and guest spots on series like Rescue Me and Scrubs. "It's just a reality that Michael gets fatigued, so that makes it difficult to completely throw himself into a long, exhausting project," says the insider. And then there's the energy that he devotes to his true passion: The Michael J. Fox Foundation for Parkinson's Research. "Michael has had his great acting successes," says the insider. "The foundation is what drives him now."

It still remains to be seen whether a cure will be found in Michael's lifetime — but that certainly won't stop him from trying. "If I overestimate the downside of something or the challenge of something and I get too obsessed about the difficulty of it, then I don't leave enough room to be open to the upside," he says. "The possibility."

— Ingela Ratledge

On April 8, the red carpet at the 31st Annual Rock and Roll Hall of Fame Induction Ceremony in Brooklyn, N.Y., was flooded with famous faces. So it's no surprise that Michael J. Fox fit right in among the ranks of Tom Hanks and Michael Douglas as he flashed his trademark grin while greeting friends and fans. "He looked great," an eyewitness tells Closer. "Michael was laughing and posing for pictures. He seemed to be genuinely having a good time."

Of course, nights out like this are rare for the Back to the Future star, 54, who has been battling Parkinson's disease for the past 25 years. When he first received the devastating diagnosis at the age of 29 — "I had a twitch in my pinkie, and the doctor said, 'You have Parkinson's disease,'" he recalls — he was warned that a rapid progression was likely. (His physician predicted that he'd only be able to work for another 10 years.) "The fact that he's still getting around is miraculous and inspiring," an insider tells Closer. While Michael's toughest days are still ahead, the Canada native is staying strong for his family: wife Tracy Pollan, 55, and their four children, Sam, 26, twin daughters Aquinnah and Schuyler, 21, and Esmé, 14. Says the insider, "It's just amazing the fight he has in him — the spirit and never-give-in attitude."

HIS FAMILY TIES

It helps that he has a wealth of support. Michael and Tracy — the fellow actors met while playing lovebirds on the sitcom Family Ties and wed in 1988 — are a united front in every sense. "They keep it together by not allowing his Parkinson's to become the be-all and end-all of their lives," says the insider, noting that the focus remains on spending quality time with their kids. IN MEMORIAM 1925–2016

The Doris Ro I Reme

By RAY ROMANO

THE EVERYBODY LOVES RAYMOND STAR SHARES CHERISHED MEMORIES OF HIS UNFORGETTABLE SITCOM MOM

DORIS' DAYS

Ray and Doris had incredible on-screen chemistry in Everybody Loves Raymond (above). They also supported charities, like the International Myeloma Foundation's Peter Boyle Memorial Fund, named for their late co-star.

I met Doris when we were casting the role of my mother on Everybody Loves Raymond. The director, Michael Lembeck, told me, "You're going to meet a couple of actresses, but Doris knocks it out of the park." He was right. If there was ever a no-contest in casting, it was Doris.

She kept taking acting classes for her entire life. They asked me if I wanted an acting coach, because I was coming from stand-up. I remember thinking, Here's this veteran actress who's still learning. So I just followed her lead.

The main thing she did for me was just to accept me. She never made me feel like the inexperienced guy I was. She complimented me. She'd constantly tell me not to worry. Because I did nothing but worry.

Even when I got a laugh, she had this enthusiasm. She wasn't a selfish actor. If she was there to set you up, she wanted it to be perfect. She was not there to be better than me — she was there to make me better.

Doris was 70 when the show started, yet she could outwork anybody. During the summer hiatuses, I would be ready to collapse, and she would be in France at a castle. She would be on a cruise — working the cruise, not just on vacation. She'd be riding a camel in Bahrain. She had this zest. And she could drink Brad Garrett under the table.

She did so much work for charity, and she testified before Congress about ageism. She was ballsy and brassy. The reason her character could be so intrusive and overbearing and still be everybody's favorite was because it came from love. I don't want to take anything away from her as an actor, but I want to give more to her as a person: It was easy for her to act that way because that's how she did everything.

"Doris never stopped wanting to learn. She was always open to getting better."

Doris was constantly talking about her son and grandkids. They were a big joy to her. She loved people. And she really loved her fans.

berts mber

After Raymond ended, I would go to her Christmas party every year. Every now and then, when I was doing shows like Men of a Certain Age, she would call me out of the blue to tell me how proud she was of me. And I couldn't give her anything at that point. She was just doing it because it was in her heart.

Doris was one of a kind. It's funny how she's going to be remembered for doing our show, but the body of work she had before it is tremendous. I didn't make her. She made me.

In the Raymond pilot, when my character gives hers a subscription to the Fruit of the Month Club and she screams, "There's too much fruit in the house!" that's when I thought, Oh, I may have lucked into something really great here. She was such a powerful voice. It was good to see such a strong woman on camera.

For all these years, when fans come up to me, they always say Doris is their favorite. It pisses me off a little! But at least they're not saying it's Brad.

—As told to Bruce Fretts

Everybody Loved Doris

THE FIVE-TIME EMMY WINNER BECAME PART OF AMERICA'S TV FAMILY

After Everybody Loves Raymond went off the air in 2005, Doris Roberts remained close with her sitcom family. In 2015, she went with creator Phil Rosenthal and his wife, Monica Horan (who played Doris' daughter-in-law Amy), to see Tony Bennett and Lady Gaga at the Hollywood Bowl. "Because of Doris, we got to go backstage," Phil tells Closer. "Lady Gaga said, 'Oh my God, I can't believe I'm meeting Doris Roberts!' I couldn't believe it. But that was Doris' power."

Raised in the Bronx after her dad deserted his family, she found love onstage. She had one line in a kindergarten play. "I heard laughter," she said. "I wanted to be an actress from that moment."

Doris with her son, Michael, from her 1956-'62 marriage to first husband Michael Cannata.

She spent years toiling in small roles until she landed a prime gig in 1983 as Pierce Brosnan's secretary on Remington Steele. But it was her virtuoso turn as the smothering but lovable Marie Barone on Raymond that made her a household name — and won her four Emmys. Like Marie, "Doris was funny and tough and loved life, living it to the fullest," says co-star Patricia Heaton.

Both on-screen and off, "she was always committed to family," says friend Marty Polasko. Her only child, Michael, became her manager and gave her three beloved grandkids. (Sadly, Doris' second marriage, to William Goyen, ended after 20 years when he died of leukemia in 1983.)

Doris treated her fans like family, too. "She always had a smile and never turned down a picture," says friend Bob Williams. As Doris put it, "With my talent, I can make people laugh and give them another attitude about life. What a blessing that is for me."

—Bruce Fretts, with reporting by Katie Bruno

HER MANY MEMORABLE ROLES

REMINGTON STEELE

"When you needed Doris, she was there," co-star Stephanie Zimbalist (with Pierce Brosnan in 1984) says. "She took life by the horns."

ST. ELSEWHERE She won her first Emmy for playing a homeless woman opposite James Coco on the hospital drama in 1982. "She was a consummate actress, totally committed to the role," executive producer Tom Fontana recalls.

CHRISTMAS VACATION Doris got into the holiday spirit (and spirits) as Chevy Chase's mother-in-law in the 1989 yuletide classic. "That was one of her favorite movies," friend Frank D'Angelo notes.

Beautiful BERLIN

THE COSMOPOLITAN GERMAN CAPITAL OFFERS
CULTURE, HISTORY AND BEAUTY

It's important to travel and move and have a continual set of experiences," insists Aussie Oscar winner Cate Blanchett. The Blue Jasmine actress has especially fond memories of traveling in Germany. "I love Berlin," she gushes. Though it boasts about 3.5 million residents, one-third of Berlin is composed of forests, gardens, rivers and lakes, giving it a light and spacious feel. In recent times, the trendy capital has become synonymous with its culture and varied artistic offerings, which Cate calls "exciting." She's often spent her visits to this European hot spot wandering its many museums, browsing galleries and attending the theater. "It's a city where, if you took the culture out...the lights would go off," explains Cate, who notes that she is just one of Berlin's many adoring fans. "Everyone wants to be there!" — Aaron Rasmussen

Celebrity Chefs' Best MOTHER'S DAY MARVELS

Celebrate the day (or any cozy Sunday) with these made-with-love brunch treats

As women, we're the glue of the family—peacemaker, cheerleader, caretaker... So it's no surprise that even on a day honoring all we do, we can't resist treating our nearest and dearest to a special meal. "Cooking is the way we express our love," says Paula Deen of why she delights in serving up "scrumptious and sinful" brunch dishes like stuffed French toast. To spread the love at your celebration, try these crowd-pleasers from Paula, Rachael Ray and Tyler Florence.

For a Mother's Day brunch, Tyler Florence loves recipes that are impressive and flavorful but not fussy, so you have time to enjoy.

Creamy-sweet indulgence!

PAULA'S RASPBERRY FRENCH TOAST

Serves 6

- 4 oz. whipped cream
- 4 oz. light cream cheese, softened
- 2 eggs
- $\frac{1}{2}$ cup milk
- $\frac{1}{2}$ tsp. brown sugar
- 12 slices wheat or white bread, crusts removed
- 1 cup fresh raspberries
- Butter (for cooking)

1. In bowl, using electric mixer, whip cream until soft peaks form. Add cream cheese; whip on low. Chill.
2. In small bowl, whisk eggs, milk and sugar. Spread cream cheese mixture on 6 bread slices; top with raspberries. Top with remaining bread slices; press around edges to seal.

3. Melt butter on griddle over medium-low. Dip sandwiches in egg mixture. Cook 2 to 3 min. per side or until golden. Serve with raspberry syrup* and powdered sugar, if desired.

*For raspberry syrup:

In saucepan over medium heat, combine 3 cups fresh or frozen raspberries, $\frac{1}{2}$ cup sugar and zest and juice of 1 lemon; bring to a boil. Let simmer 15 to 18 min. or until berries are soft and syrup has reduced by half.

PER SERVING: 302 cal, 12g protein, 28g carbs, 5g fiber, 5g sugar, 16g fat

For easy morning prep, make the dough the night before and let it rise overnight in the fridge.

TYLER'S BEIGNETS

Serves 12

- $\frac{3}{4}$ cup warm water
- 1 packet active dry yeast
- $\frac{1}{4}$ cup sugar
- Pinch kosher salt
- 1 large egg
- $\frac{1}{2}$ cup whole milk
- 4 cups flour
- 2 tbsp. butter
- Vegetable oil (for deep frying)
- $\frac{1}{4}$ cup powdered sugar (for dusting)
- Raspberries (for garnish)

1. Activate yeast in water as package directs. Let sit 10 min.
2. Transfer yeast to bowl of stand mixer. Add next 4 ingredients. With mixer on low, add half the flour and mix until just combined. Add butter; gradually add remaining flour until dough forms a ball. Transfer dough to greased bowl; cover with plastic wrap. Chill at least 3 hrs. or overnight.

3. Place dough on floured work surface. Gently shape into 1"-thick rectangle; cut into 12 equal squares.

4. In large pot over medium heat, heat 3" oil to 350°F. Fry squares in batches, about 3 min. per batch, turning once. Remove to paper towel-lined sheet pan. Dust with powdered sugar; serve garnished with raspberries.

PER SERVING: 246 cal, 5g protein, 39g carbs, 1g fiber, 7g sugar, 8g fat

Béchamel sauce gives this classic sandwich rich gourmet flavor.

RACHAEL'S CROQUE MADAME

Serves 4

- 4 tbsp. butter, divided
- 1 rounded tbsp. all-purpose flour
- 1 cup milk
- $\frac{1}{8}$ tsp. fresh grated nutmeg
- 2 tsp. grainy mustard
- 4 large eggs
- 8 slices of bread
- 8 slices deli ham
- 4 oz. shredded Swiss cheese

1. In saucepot over medium heat, melt 2 tbsp. butter. Whisk in flour; cook 1 min. Whisk in milk; bring to a boil, then reduce heat to low. Add nutmeg, mustard and salt and pepper. When sauce coats back of a spoon, turn off heat.

2. In skillet over medium-low heat, melt 1 tbsp. butter. Crack in 4 large eggs, keeping whites separate. Cook to preferred doneness. Set aside.
3. Toast bread slices; spread with remaining butter. Divide béchamel among 4 bread slices; top each with 1 slice ham. Top with half of shredded cheese. Layer with remaining ham, bread slices and remaining cheese. Transfer sandwiches to skillet and top each with a fried egg; cover and cook 5 min. or until cheese is melted. Serve immediately.

PER SERVING: 420 cal, 23g protein, 17g carbs, 1g fiber, 4g sugar, 29g fat

5 Superfoods to Help You ENERGIZED AND

The everyday health hassles that make women feel drained and down won't put a damper on your springtime fun, thanks to these delicious remedies straight from nature!

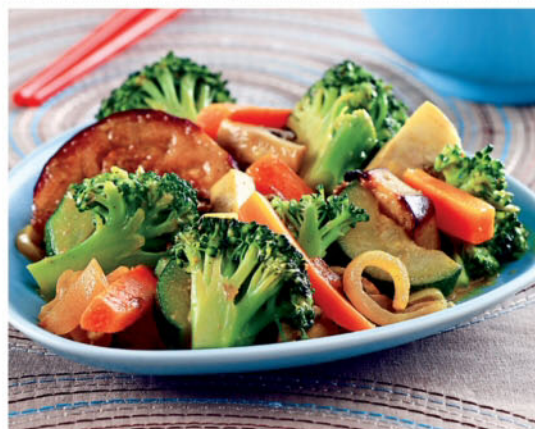

1 WATERMELON FLUSHES BLOAT

This juicy melon is in season now, and if you treat yourself to 2 cups daily, you can shed up to 4 pounds in 2 weeks, say Stanford University researchers. How? Watermelon's plant compounds speed the release of trapped fluids to flatten a bloated belly, plus switch on the genes that burn belly-fat stores. For a sweet snack, blend 2 cups of seedless watermelon with 3 ice cubes and a sprig of mint until smooth.

2 PINEAPPLE HEALS ACHY MUSCLES

Nature's delicious Rx for muscle aches and pains: Enjoy 1 cup of pineapple a day. Scientists at Stanford University say you could experience relief from even chronic pain in as little as 10 days. The reason: Enzymes in the tropical fruit break up fibrin, a tissue-irritating protein that builds up in damaged muscles. Bonus: Additional enzymes in pineapple improve digestion to ease GI woes.

4 BROCCOLI SOOTHES STRESS

This nutritional powerhouse can help keep your spirits high, even when you're feeling stressed. The credit goes to inositol, a B vitamin that has been shown to increase the production of the calming brain chemical GABA. Stanford University studies suggest that enjoying 1 cup of broccoli 4 times a week eases irritability for 75 percent of women.

Feel SUNNY

3 PEAS BANISH A BLUE MOOD

These tiny green treasures are packed with amino acids that serve as the building blocks of several mood-boosting brain chemicals, including serotonin, dopamine and oxytocin. The effect is so powerful that eating just 1 cup of peas can chase away grumpiness for up to 5 hours. Another perk: Peas are rich in vitamin E, which has been shown to dial down joint pain.

5 EGGS WARD OFF FOG AND FATIGUE

Mom was right when she said we should eat eggs at breakfast: Enjoying two can boost your get-up-and-go by 75 percent for up to 4 hours. The reason? Eggs are rich in choline, a nutrient that has been shown to enhance the transfer of messages between brain neurons to banish tiredness. Bonus: Eggs are proven to boost satiety by 50 percent for 3 hours.

FREEDOM FROM

These natural strategies are proven to end your most bothersome springtime symptoms — fast

When you start feeling congested, tired and run-down at this time of year, it's easy to chalk it up to a spring cold. But you may actually be dealing with allergies — even if you've never had them before, says Neeta Ogden, M.D., an allergist in Englewood, New Jersey.

“Women over 50 are increasingly being affected for the first time.” She attributes the upswing to warmer, longer springs and record-breaking pollen counts.

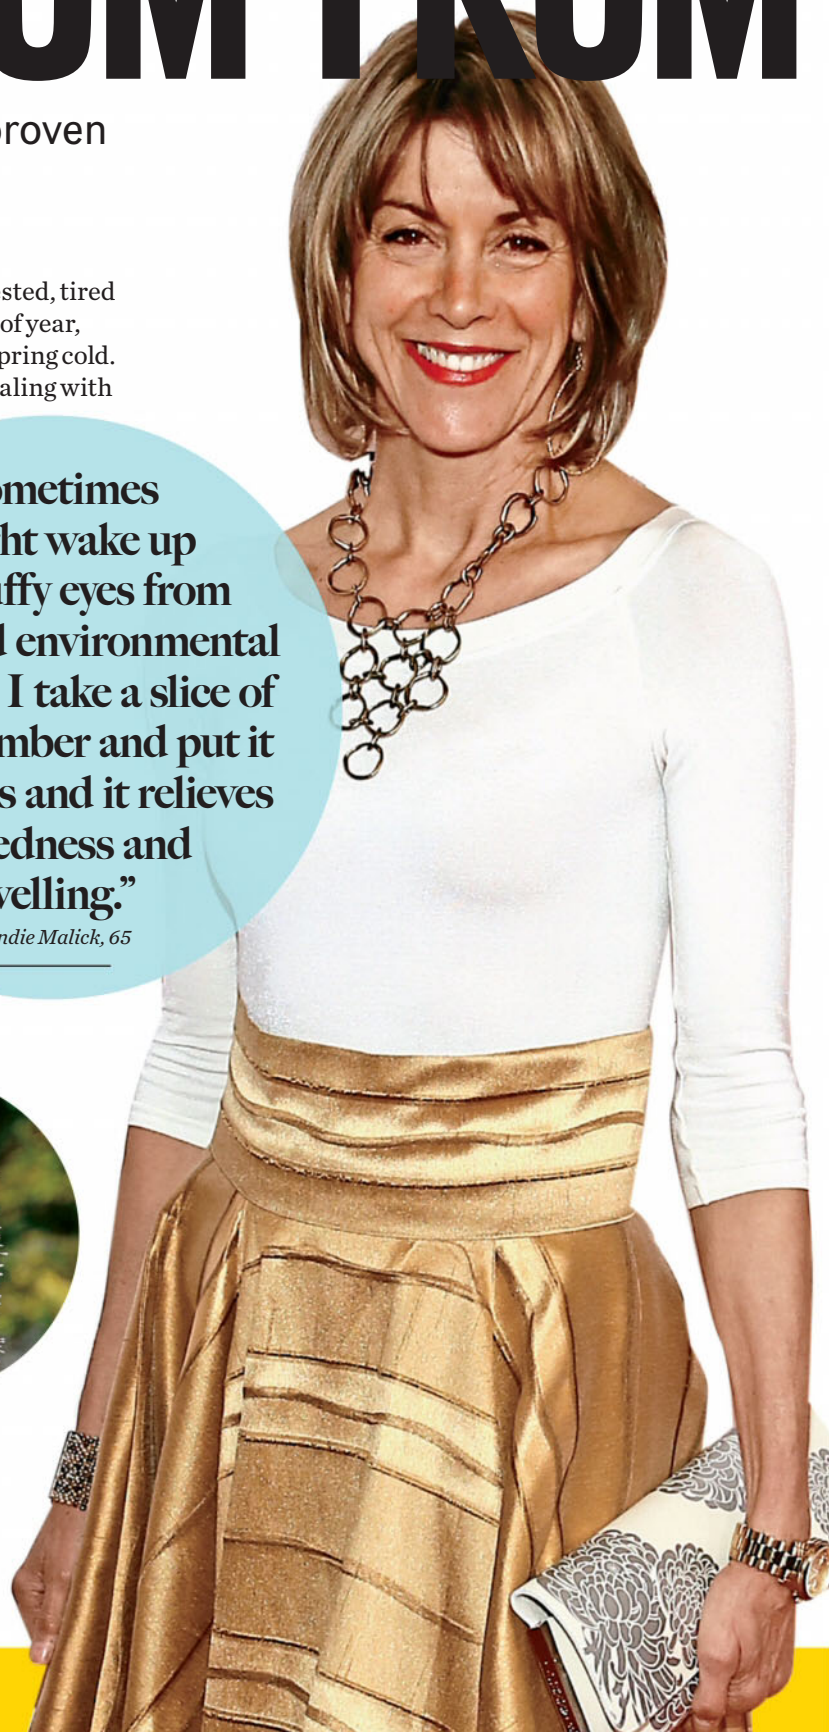

You can tell allergies are to blame if your sneezing, congestion and itchy eyes come and go throughout the season (unlike a cold, which only lasts for a few days). And to put an end to symptoms, experts recommend these targeted strategies.

“Sometimes I might wake up with puffy eyes from pollen and environmental allergens. I take a slice of cool cucumber and put it on my eyes and it relieves the redness and swelling.”

Wendie Malick, 65

TO CLEAR CONGESTION

An extract of the butterbur plant has been shown in studies to ease congestion as effectively as prescription medications. Scientists credit butterbur's ability to tamp down the body's production of the inflammatory compounds that kick-start many allergic reactions. The proven dose: 100 mg to 150 mg of butterbur daily. Just be sure to pick a supplement that contains a standardized extract free of pyrrolizidine alkaloids, compounds that can hinder liver function. A brand we like: Swanson Superior Herbs Butterbur Extract ($4, swansonvitamins.com).

ALLERGIES

TO SOOTHE ITCHY, IRRITATED EYES

Actress Wendie Malick's spa-inspired cucumber eye mask is a pampering way to relieve puffy allergy eyes, says Dr. Ogden. The veggie's astringent properties help ease swelling and irritation. Also smart: Thoroughly wash your lids and lashes twice daily with a gentle skin cleanser. Doing so can reduce redness, itching, watering and puffiness by as much as 90 percent, report scientists at Long Island Hospital in New York. That's because cleansing the lash area removes microscopic sticky pollen before it can work its way onto the mucous membrane of the eyes and cause a negative immune reaction, explains Dr. Ogden. A cleanser that consistently receives five-star reviews from users: Cetaphil ($5, drugstore.com).

TO QUELL A COUGH

Adding 2 tbsp. of flax to your daily diet can cut coughing and sore throats by 51 percent, according to German scientists. Flax is rich in an omega-3 fatty acid (alpha-linolenic acid) that reduces immune cells' production of histamine — the inflammatory compound that irritates throat nerves to stimulate a cough. To get relief, sprinkle flaxseeds on cereal or salads or mix ground flax into smoothies. Another option: Barlean's Omega Swirl Flax Oil ($13, barleans.com). A 1 tbsp. serving provides the beneficial dose of omega-3s, plus the creamy liquid soothes a sore throat on contact.

TO END SNEEZING

If sneezing fits are making you miserable, try upping your intake of vitamin B₅ (pantothenic acid) — a key building block of powerful anti-inflammatory hormones called glucocorticoids. "Glucocorticoids dampen sinus irritation and inflammation, making you much less likely to struggle, even when pollen counts are high," says Ronald Hoffman, M.D., author of Alternative Cures that Really Work. To boost your intake, add foods rich in vitamin B₅, such as salmon, sunflower seeds, yogurt, mushrooms, corn, cauliflower and broccoli, to your daily diet. Or consider taking a B₅ supplement. A brand we like: Life Extension Pantothenic Acid 500 mg ($11, lifeextension.com).

TO IMPROVE SLEEP

For 85 percent of allergy sufferers, trouble breathing leads to sleepless nights and next-day fatigue. But a study published in the Annals of Allergy, Asthma & Immunology suggests that a 15-minute evening bath can help. The reason: A relaxing soak reduces levels of cortisol (a hormone that intensifies allergic reactions) and stimulates the production of the sleep hormone melatonin. And for extra relief, Dr. Ogden advises washing your hair while you soak — this removes pollen particles trapped in hair, which helps reduce early morning congestion by 55 percent.

HEALTHY LIVING

News You Can Use

BREAST TESTS ARE A CLUE TO HEART DISEASE RISK

So say scientists at the Icahn School of Medicine at Mt. Sinai in New York City. In their study, 70 percent of women whose mammograms showed calcium buildup in breast arteries had the same level of calcification in the coronary arteries — an early sign of heart disease. "This information is available on every mammogram, with no additional cost or radiation exposure," says study author Harvey Hecht, M.D. Experts advise asking your radiologist if your scan shows calcification and discussing that information with your health-care provider.

BLUEBERRIES ARE A BOON FOR THE BRAIN

In a study at the University of Cincinnati, older adults with mild cognitive impairment were given a blueberry powder (equal to 1 cup of blueberries) once a day for 16 weeks. The result: They experienced improvements in cognitive performance and brain function. The authors credit the fruit's anthocyanins, compounds shown to improve memory by 44 percent in previous studies.

DANCING KEEPS YOU YOUNG

Older women who took a twice-a-week Latin dance class increased their walking speed by 10 percent and weekly physical activity by 26 percent, say scientists at the University of Chicago. The experts say dance engages people emotionally, which makes it easier to stick to it. Bonus: Dance has also been shown to ease stress.

A Cheery Bouquet to

BRIGHTEN THE DAY

A pitcher of fresh-picked posies is a wonderful way to treat a mom in your life — or yourself! Here, florist tricks for a stunning display

WHAT'S NEW

This Mother's Day, florists are combining bright garden and field flowers for a truly eye-catching look. "Whether this bunch is showcased at a sunny brunch or gifted to a sweet mom, it's sure to delight," says floral pro Sharon Naylor. "Each bloom differs dramatically in texture, shape and color, forming a playground of visual interest. And the pretty pitcher polishes the display with laid-back charm."

GET THE LOOK

Start by filling an 8" pitcher halfway with water. Then snip 4 or 5 each of different flowers (like peonies, delphinium, blue cornflowers, foxglove and achemillia) to 11 or 12 inches. Arrange stems in your hand one by one, twirling the bunch as you add each flower in a relaxed fashion. To secure the bouquet (and make it easy to change the water), tie the bunch around the middle with twine and pop it into the vase.

FLORIST'S SECRET

The surprisingly easy way extend the life of a fresh-picked garden bouquet, according to Naylor: "Of course, it's smart to pour out the water every other day and refill with fresh water. But to keep blooms extra bright and perky, simply add ¼ tsp. of hydrogen peroxide to the pitcher each day. This suppresses any bacterial growth that can cause garden flowers to prematurely fade."

READERS ASK CLOSER

Q Is it true Tom Jones wrote The Fantasticks?

A Try to remember there's more than one Tom Jones. And the one who wrote the lyrics to the long-running musical, which opened May 3, 1960, hails from Texas, not Wales.

Q Didn't the Ewings have a fourth son on Dallas?

A Well, only for the series finale on May 3, 1991. In it, Larry Hagman's J.R. has the chance to see what the world would've been like if he were never born — which means there was room for the youngest Ewing boy, Jason (Patrick Pankhurst).

Julianne Phillips

Following her gig as workaholic businesswoman Frankie, Julianne, who turns 56 on May 6, worked on a few movies like Big Bully before stepping away from the business. Bruce Springsteen's ex has been fairly mum as to why. "I have always been incredibly private when it comes to my private life."

Patricia Kalember

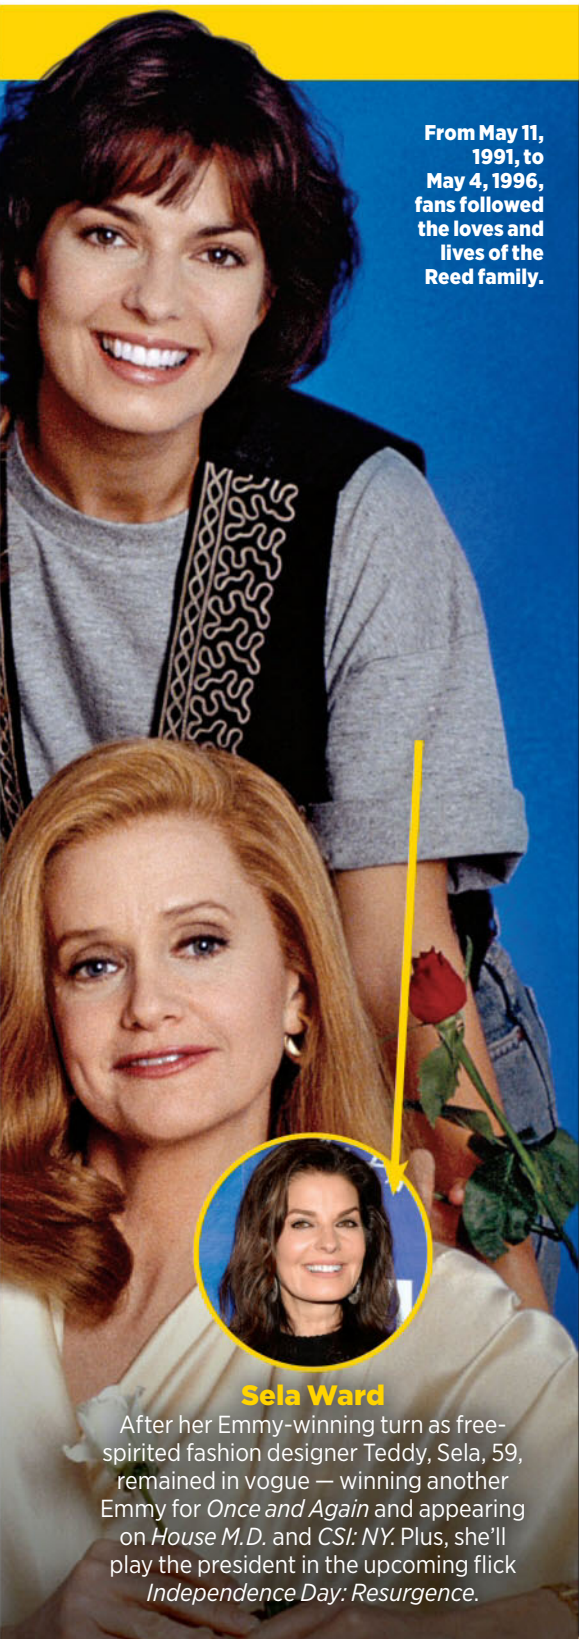

Georgie was the quintessential stay-at-home mom. But Patricia, 58, has been out and about with recurring roles on Law & Order: SVU, Blue Bloods and Orange Is the New Black. She also appeared in the Broadway play Don't Dress for Dinner.

Swoosie Kurtz

While wealthy sis Alex landed her own talk show, Swoosie, 71, has had a host of jobs — starring onstage, in movies such as Bubble Boy and on TV in Huff, Pushing Daisies, Nurse Jackie and, most recently, as Melissa McCarthy's mother on Mike & Molly.

From May 11, 1991, to May 4, 1996, fans followed the loves and lives of the Reed family.

Sela Ward

After her Emmy-winning turn as free-spirited fashion designer Teddy, Sela, 59, remained in vogue — winning another Emmy for Once and Again and appearing on House M.D. and CSI: NY. Plus, she'll play the president in the upcoming flick Independence Day: Resurgence.

Returning Music to a Man's Life

When homeless musician Mark Landry's violin was stolen, he felt his life was over. His instrument wasn't just his only source of joy, it was his means of collecting tips in the Montreal subway, where he has played for the past six years. But members of the city's Orchestre Metropolitain heard his story and understood his pain. "We had to realize this person was not just a nobody," says orchestra CEO Jean Dupre. "This was a person who played music." They purchased a

Park Opens as Shelter

Syrian refugees arriving at a Wild West-themed amusement park in Sweden weren't there for the rides or shows — they're there taking shelter.

"We're only open three months a year and we have 600 beds," explains Emil Erlandsson, the owner of High Chaparral park in rural Kulltorp, Sweden, who invited 500 Syrian refugees to stay until they can find permanent housing. "When we saw that refugees are now supposed to live in tents," says Erlandsson, "we made a decision that we should help."

EXCLUSIVE

CARLOS SANTANA

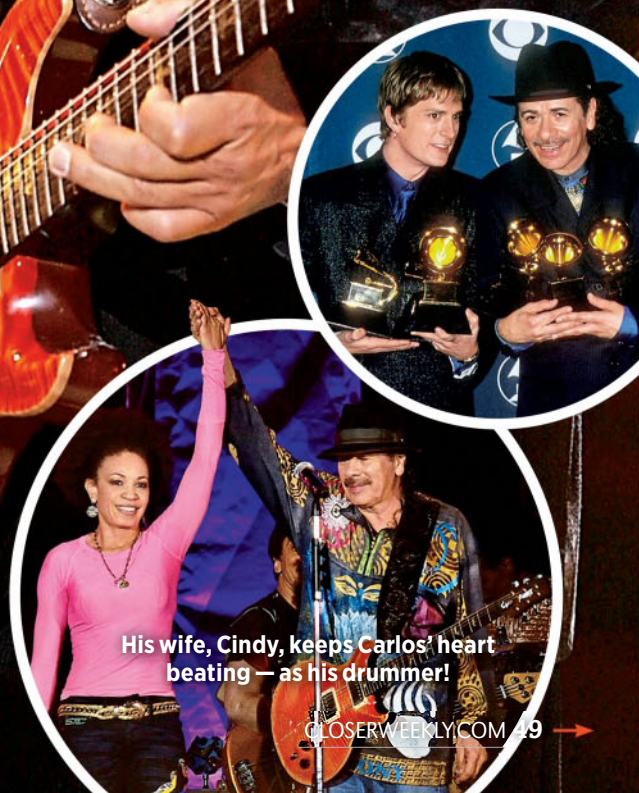

'My Wife Is My BEST FRIEND'

The legendary guitarist riffs on life, love and what he's learned so far

When Carlos Santana stepped onto the Woodstock stage in 1969 with his band, Santana, no one — including him — realized just how famous he'd become. "Our music relates to the heart of the human condition and I didn't know it then — but I know it now," Carlos, 68, shares with Closer. "And I'm very grateful to God and people that it is so." An artistic pioneer with his unique fusion of rock, jazz and Latin music, the Mexican-American musician has sold over 100 million records, yet he's never lost his soft-spoken, philosophical hippie side. As he debuts his new CD Santana IV (reuniting his 1971–1972 band), Carlos opens up to Closer about his kids, loving marriage to wife Cindy and his many inspirations. — Mike Greenblatt

GETTY (3)

Carlos' "Smooth" duet partner, Rob Thomas, helped him nab eight Grammys in 2000.

His wife, Cindy, keeps Carlos' heart beating — as his drummer!

HEART to heart

Congrats on reuniting the band!

Thank God we get around and we're still here — with even more energy!

What are the benefits of being in this stage of your life?

You learn to value you. You celebrate from the point of view of a lot other people who didn't make it, because they overdosed on themselves. They didn't know when to park that [famous] personality in the closet and be a person. I've always believed in separating onstage and offstage.

Why is that so important for you?

Being onstage is, indeed, a high. As soon as you play your last note, become the person, not the personality. It's very, very exhausting to maintain a personality. I think that's what killed Whitney Houston...and Jimi Hendrix. They didn't know when to get off the stage, and they tried to maintain that high.

How do you avoid that trap?

When you come to either of my homes, whether it's here in the [San Francisco] Bay Area or in Las Vegas, there's absolutely no Santana. No gold records on the walls. Just pictures of my parents, my children and musicians I love, like John Coltrane and Miles Davis.

You've been married to your drummer, Cindy Blackman Santana, since 2010. Is it hard to maintain a marriage at home and work?

Cindy is my best friend beyond anything else. I love her aspirations, her vision, her dedication. In many ways, she is like Bruce Lee with her nutrition and exercise. She's totally disciplined. Always drinking water. Always happy, extremely positive, wonderful to be with. She's very involved and secure. In fact, she is everything I pray for. And I did pray to meet her!

You'd been married to your first wife, Deborah, from 1973 to 2007. What did you learn from divorce?

Growth. I bless my ex-wife for the years we had together, sharing and growing. We manifested a lot of beauty. However, honoring a divorce is knowing you or [your partner] will grow faster spiritually. When something comes to a standstill, you do need to separate. Painful as it is, bless her to grow faster somewhere else and keep making progress.

What are you like as a dad to your adult kids Salvador, Angelica and Stella?

I am fair. I am present. I am compassionate. I discipline, yes, but my mind, heart, arms and wallet are open...and they will not take advantage of that! [Laughs]

BUCKET LIST

Carlos' dream duet? "Aretha Franklin — she is our royalty. I saw her at the Kennedy Center Honors singing '(You Make Me Feel Like) A Natural Woman' and everybody was crying. She even had President Obama singing!"

THE GAME OF LIFE

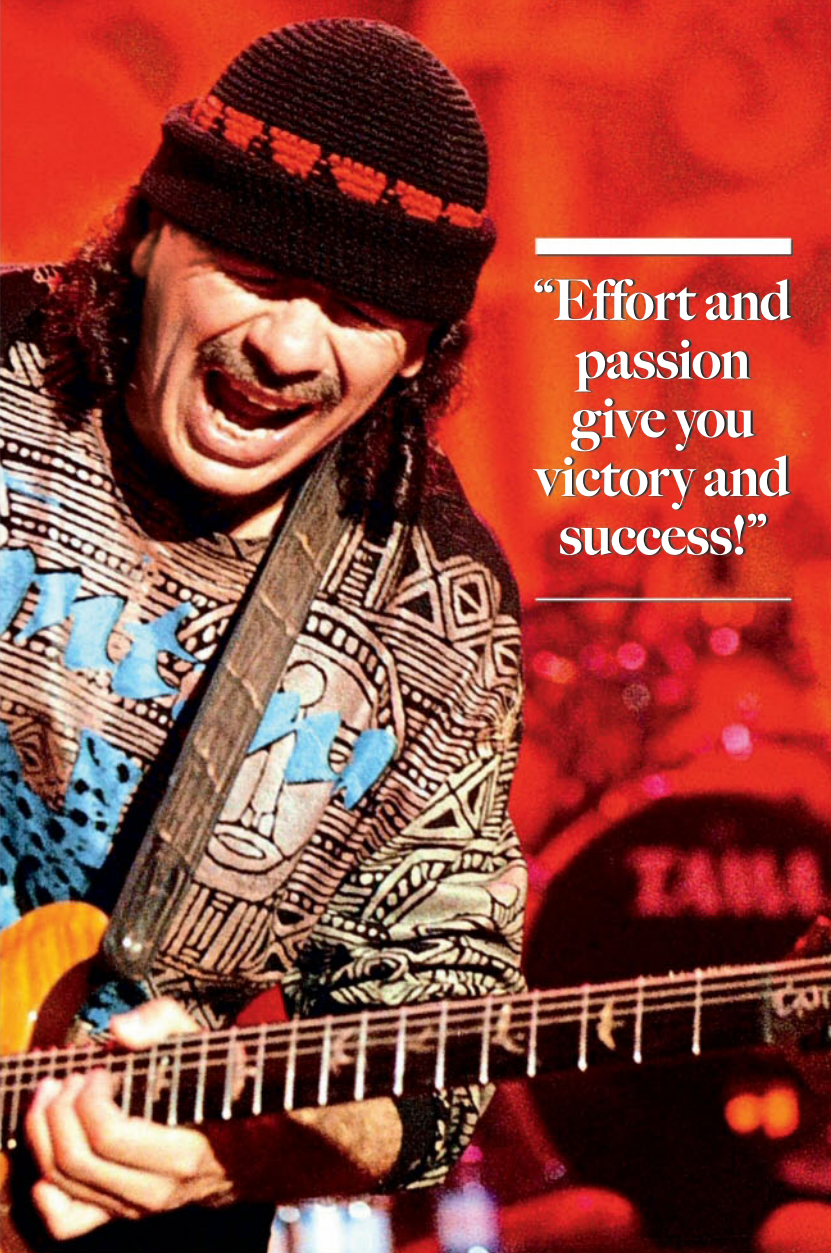

THE SURVIVOR

Raised in Tijuana, Mexico, Carlos (here in 1966) suffered sexual abuse before moving to San Francisco and attending Mission High: "The main thing that I've learned is that I am not what happened to me."

THE PHENOMENON Santana blew away the crowd at Woodstock in 1969. "There were no squares, no plastic people," Carlos recalled — but he doesn't remember much else. "I was at the peak of LSD [use]."

THE LOVER Sheila E. tells Closer she was just 18 and "really in love" when she fell for Carlos in the mid-'70s. Though the romance didn't last, they've remained friends over the years.

“Effort and passion give you victory and success!”

What do you wish you knew in the '60s that you know now about the music biz?

I wish I had the clarity and confidence I have now. When I come into the room with Cindy, I know we can get it done. When we walk into a baseball or basketball game to do the national anthem, we bring what I call a “collective commonality frequency.” I’m very grateful to God and to people like John Lennon, Michael Jackson and Bob Marley for showing me the way.

Touring can be incredibly demanding. How do you stay fit so you can keep up the hectic pace?

My lovely wife has convinced me to drink a lot of water, play tennis and move around a lot all the time. Don’t coagulate. Move! I also meditate when I eat, when I make love, when I swim in the pool — it distills fear out of your existence.

What’s something no one knows about you?

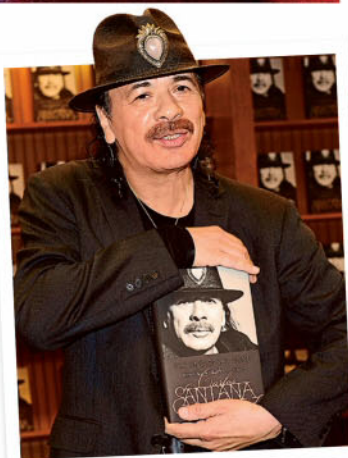

Maybe that I am a political activist as much as I am a musician. For instance, I intend to meet with mayors around the country to invite them to have a program called “Drums for Guns.” We’ll play congas and bongos and give them away for their guns, and when we have enough guns, we’ll melt them all down into a statue of an angel.

That’s great. If you had to pick one word to describe yourself, what would it be?

If the word can be hyphenated, I can think of two: Child-of-God...or badass-Mexican!

THE OPENER Beyoncé danced to his “Oye Como Va” at the 2003 Super Bowl pregame show, an especially exciting event for Carlos. Even though his team lost, he said, “I’ll always be a Raiders fan!”

THE AUTHOR Carlos dedicated his 2014 memoir, The Universal Tone: Bringing My Story to Life, to his mom, Josefina: “She probably prayed for me more than anyone to keep me from getting lost.”

THE LEGEND Santana’s 1971–1972 lineup (Neal Schon, Gregg Rolie, Carlos, Michael Carabello and Michael Shrieve) is reuniting for a new CD and tour/live DVD. “It’s just been a great joy all the way around,” he shared.

THIS WEEK'S NEWS ON AFFAIRS OF THE HEART

Bruce Willis & Emma Heming

Wedding Bells Will Ring Again?

Forget the seven-year itch! Emma Heming wed Bruce Willis in 2009 — and she tells Closer they may be walking down the aisle again very soon! “It’s definitely a possibility,” notes the 37-year-old of renewing her vows with Bruce on their 10th anniversary. In a few years, their girls (Mabel, 4, and Evelyn, 23 months) “will be older and will be able to appreciate it,” says Emma. In the meantime, the Die Hard star, 61, and his Malta-born model wife work hard to ensure their marriage remains a top priority. The two love to “spend a lot of time at home” together, Emma revealed to Closer at the Room to Grow Annual Spring Benefit at NYC’s Tribeca Three Sixty on April 14. “But we still have a date night once a week!” She adds, “We always try and make time for each other. My husband is super supportive — we are a good match for each other.”

“I just try to go to work and concentrate on coming home to my girls.”

—Bruce

Emma gushes that Bruce still makes her “feel like a newlywed.”

Emily Mortimer & Alessandro Nivola

The Way to Her Man’s Heart

EMILY MORTIMER knows the way to her man’s heart! “She is a great cook,” her husband, actor Alessandro Nivola, boasts to Closer. “She has a different [dish] for every day of the year — she’s never cooked the same thing.” The Newsroom’s Emily jokes that she uses her culinary hobby as a way of “dodging” other responsibilities, but that’s just fine with Alessandro, 43. Reveals Emily, “I get quite some praise!”

Emily, 44, tells Closer she and her husband really “like food” and bond over good meals.

Jenny tells Closer that when it comes to marriage, keep “the lines of communication open.”

Jason Biggs & Jenny Mollen

Doctor’s Orders!

JASON BIGGS and his wife, Jenny Mollen, happily credit couples therapy with keeping their marriage in tip-top shape. “I have a therapist, she has her own individual therapist and then together we have a session,” the 37-year-old Orange Is the New Black star revealed to Closer at the IWC Schaffhausen For the Love of Cinema Gala in NYC. When an occasional issue does arise, “we just work our way through it,” adds Jenny, 36.

WHO: Rita Wilson and Tom Hanks

WHERE: After tying the knot, the newlyweds hosted a reception at LA restaurant Rex’s.

"When it was good, I was absolutely over-the-moon happy," Rita Coolidge (in 1977) writes of her eight years with Kris Kristofferson. "When it was sad, it was almost too much to bear."

Rita Coolidge Opens Up: My Life With Kris

THE SINGER REVEALS NEW DETAILS ABOUT THE MUSIC AND THE HEARTBREAK SHE SHARED WITH KRIS KRISTOFFERSON

It was love at first flight for Rita Coolidge and Kris Kristofferson. The rock 'n' rollers met in the early '70s on a plane bound for Memphis, Tenn. "We just talked, literally, all the way," Rita writes in her new memoir, Delta Lady. "[That night], before we fell asleep, we had named our child. We knew that we would marry. It was so powerful."

They wed in 1973 and later had a daughter, Casey. That same year, their first of three duet albums, Full Moon, topped the charts. Rita recalls their creative collaborations, saying the "powerful, powerful love that we had for each other just went right up through the microphone and onto the records." Yet the heat between them often boiled over.

"From the beginning, we argued a lot," says Rita, now 71. Rita says Kris, now 79, was "controlling," though she admits, "we both had strong personalities and tended not to back down in an argument."

Kris' drinking only fueled the tension between them. And even though he quit the bottle after watching his character in 1976's A Star Is Born self-destruct from alcohol, by 1977, Rita says, the marriage was falling apart. "I was crying all the time.... I cried because I felt bad for Casey. I felt I wasn't a good mother." She and Kris ultimately divorced in 1980.

Rita went on to find love again, eventually marrying computer science professor Tatsuya Suda in 2004. But she still looks back on her early life, even if she has bitter-sweet feelings. "What [Kris and I] went through...[is] bigger than I've ever had with anyone else," Rita says. "Everything we did was larger than life."

— Bruce Fretts

"There is a part of me that will always love Kris."

Rita (at a recent book signing) released a Christmas album in 2012.

CELEBRATE THE AMERICAN WEST!

Few coins have captured the free spirit of this nation, or represented her so well, as the Buffalo Nickel. Designed by the U.S. Mint and in circulation just as the American West was passing into legend, it has become a hotly-collected memento of pride in our nation's rich heritage. Now it is the star of The Buffalo Nickel Heirloom Stein, exclusively from The Bradford Exchange.

Featuring two genuine Buffalo Nickels on front and back, this porcelain stein is inspired by the intricate leather tooling on a fine saddle and gleams with 22K gold accents. The famed portrait created by James Earle Fraser from the noble faces of three Native American chiefs is handsomely framed by a turquoise and rope border. The stein includes a sculpted "buffalo horn" handle ready to raise a toast to the spirit of the West.

PRINCE 1958—2016

Farewell to A MUSIC LEGEND

THE PERFORMER PIONEERED
THE SOUNDS OF THE '80S

Shortly after midnight on April 17, Prince played “Chopsticks” on his new purple Yamaha piano for the crowd assembled at Paisley Park near Minneapolis for a dance party. It had been reported that Prince, 57, had been suffering from the flu and had become gravely ill on a flight on April 15, but he wanted to prove to his fans that he was on the mend. “Wait a few days before you waste any prayers,” he told the crowd.

“He definitely sounded like he had a cold,” witness Jamie Reimann tells Closer, adding that the performer seemed “frail” and needed help getting on and off the stage. But on April 21, police were called to his home, and one of modern history’s greatest musical geniuses was gone.

A RARE TALENT

Born Prince Rogers Nelson in Minneapolis, this multi-instrumentalist’s funky grooves, gravity-defying falsetto and provocative lyrics brought him a string of hits in the 1980s. “Little Red Corvette,” “1999,” along with “When Doves Cry” and “Let’s Go Crazy” from the soundtrack of his film Purple Rain, helped propel him into the same superstar realm as Michael Jackson and Madonna.

Over the next few decades, Prince’s fame never waned, even when he changed his name to an unpronounceable symbol in 1993 during a dispute with his record company.

“I like to believe that my inspiration comes from God,” said the twice-divorced artist, who was planning to release a “poetic” autobiography in 2017. “I didn’t always think that, but as you get older you get smarter.” — Louise A. Barile, with reporting by Diana Cooper

The star, a seven-time winner, appeared at the Grammys in February 2015.

DENISE AUSTIN

California Dreamin'

The fitness queen envisioned a perfect beach house near her loved ones — and made it come true By GREGG GOLDSTEIN

For lifestyle guru Denise Austin, moving from Virginia to build her dream house in a coastal LA suburb was all about family.

"I'm one of five children, as is my husband, Jeff, and our families still live in Southern California," Denise, 59, tells Closer. "We rented the house next door to this one every summer so our daughters, Katie and Kelly, could be near their cousins. When my high school friend found out this place was being sold, and Katie got into USC, we knew it was time to come home."

Denise and Jeff, 64, knew they'd found the right spot when they purchased this beachside property in 2010 — but they weren't in a rush to pull up stakes. The couple didn't want to go through the process of moving Kelly and Katie (now in their 20s), who were playing lacrosse back East. So they tore down the house and took their sweet time — two years — building a

"I'm proud of selling [more than 24 million] videos and DVDs over my career," says Denise, who's now launching a bistroMD meal line.

The downstairs family room has polished concrete floors and a painting she commissioned, with resin "like a surfboard [to] represent California."

HAIR AND MAKEUP: DENA ZADOK-CHAFFIN. INSET: R/R

Two chairs from Denise's line (left) are showcased in her living room.

"If the whole family's over, we bring in another table," says Denise of the dining area. "We can have up to 30 people!"

new home on the snug 2,434-square-foot lot.

"We love open spaces, and our dream was to bring the outside inside, to be able to feel the beach and be a part of it," she shares. "Thankfully, Jeff is good at designing!"

The stylish result? A four-bedroom, six-bath, three-story home with floor-to-ceiling glass doors that allow sunlight to stream throughout the gorgeously appointed rooms that Denise decorated herself.

"We had to open it up to the beach on each level, and after that, there wasn't a whole lot left to design," Denise says with a laugh. "The original plans were very formal — a giant, dramatic circular foyer and staircase — and we are very informal. So we reimagined the design and decided on things like not needing a separate dining room. Seeing the ocean from the living room makes me feel like I'm on vacation when I'm not!"

Their rooftop patio added another great view, and having the Pacific a few feet away dictated other choices, too. "We knew the flooring needed to look distressed and not oxidize with the beach air," so they added

Denise calls her bedroom “very serene.”

Her chic office has a gorgeous view of the Pacific Ocean.

DENISE'S DARLINGS

Halle Berry and Bruce Willis

“I warmed up the crowd for the Revlon Run/Walk for Women,” she said of the 2014 cancer charity event. “Do you recognize the famous faces?”

Jack LaLanne

“He gave me my start on TV,” she says of her co-host on The Jack LaLanne Show in 1981. “I credit him as a mentor, and we remained very close friends.”

Hugh Jackman

When she met the X-Men star at an event, “he was so friendly — just a really nice guy.”

faux driftwood and polished concrete. “It’s like living on a boat — nothing is rust-free!”

The kitchen’s bar stools and two of the living room’s white chairs are from Denise’s new home furnishings line and fit in nicely with the decor she calls “beach modern with a touch of mid-century.” She prefers a streamlined, clutter-free look, “which is why I’ve kept everything very seamless,” she shares. “I’ve learned that simple is better.”

And while there is a designated office, the entire property is her work space. “I’ll exercise on the beach, bring out weights, go for a long walk with friends — here, the gym is everywhere,” she says. The kitchen’s huge island features a stove top so she can cook while talking with friends — and get their input on her new Denise Austin bistroMD meal delivery foods.

“I grew up very modestly in a house with one bathroom, and attended high school not far from here,” she says wistfully. “I’d visit friend’s homes along the beach and say, ‘One day...’ This place is a dream come true!”

Rim your waterline with a nude liner, like Jennifer does, to create more definition.

Our experts answer your most pressing

Q I love a smoky eye, but is it too heavy for spring?

A Not if you put a twist on it! Instead of using dark grays, like you traditionally would, switch to earth tones, like brown, gold and taupe. These neutral hues add definition without looking heavy. And they're flattering on all eye colors and skin tones! To apply, start by sweeping a shadow two shades lighter than your skin tone over your entire lid. Then, using an eye shadow brush, blend a shadow one or two shades darker than your skin tone along the crease and top and bottom lash lines to create the smoky effect. Finish with two coats of mascara.

Expert Tip:

Keep shimmery shadow on inner corners, where it has a brightening effect. Shimmer on the crease and outer eye will accentuate wrinkles.

Q Besides simplifying, is there a benefit to using 2-in-1 cheek and lip stains?

A "Definitely! The idea of a 2-in-1 cheek and lip stain is actually an old trick women used to do with lipstick. The matching cheek and lip color give skin a radiant, natural-looking glow," says makeup artist and founder of Armour Beauty, Theo Kogan. "But the key is finding a shade that complements both your lips and skin tone. A color only one or two shades darker than your natural lip color will be foolproof!" Apply the stain onto lips, then dab onto the apples of cheeks, using your fingers to blend.

Q Is it possible to use heat tools regularly without damaging my hair?

A Yes, and the secret is twofold. "First, always prep strands with a heat-protecting spray, which coats strands to prevent damage," says Sarah Rappolt, master stylist and education coordinator at Ion Studio NYC. Then, consider your hair type: thin strands? Use lower heat — medium on a dryer or 250 degrees on an iron. Got a thick mane? Denser strands can handle high heat settings.

BEAUTIFUL

questions so every day can be gorgeous

Q I've seen concealer in colors besides nude. How do you use that?

A Each color serves a different purpose: To reduce redness, use green; since green and red are opposites on the color wheel, green works to cancel out red spots and blemishes. Skin looking dull and sallow? Purple offsets the yellow undertones that make your complexion appear pallid. Lastly, go for peach or yellow if you're trying to conceal purple or blue under-eye circles. These warm tones counteract the dark color of circles, acting as a highlighter to illuminate eyes. Dab concealer onto the inner half of your under-eye only. Concealer on the outer corners will look cakey and have an aging effect.

Q My stretch marks are getting darker as I age. Why and what can I do about it?

A "Excess sun exposure and hormonal changes are key reasons stretch marks become more visible," says Wendy Lewis, beauty expert and editor in chief of beautyinthebag.com. Here's how you can fade them: Mix equal parts lemon juice and coffee grounds, then massage onto skin for 10 minutes. The acidity in lemons acts as a natural bleaching agent, while coffee stimulates new collagen, improving the appearance and firmness of skin. Apply twice a week.

BEST FRIENDS

Somebody to Love

Edie Falco The Nurse Jackie star embraces a new animal rescue role

I've always had animals in the house," Edie Falco tells Closer. "There's just more love and a feeling of family when you have a pet around." In fact, the Nurse Jackie star, here with her Brussels griffon Sami (left) and a fellow rescue pup named Nico, loves her furry friends so much that she's now representing the ASPCA's latest pet adoption campaign, 150 Days of Rescue. "There's something different about rescues," says Edie, who adopted Sami from NYC's Animal Haven shelter five years ago. "They're just so kind, caring and grateful." And her little Sami is no exception! "I love spending time with her," the Emmy winner, 52, gushes. "Just having her there next to me feels great."

Drew Barrymore Heavy Lifting

"There is such profoundness in [the] connectivity that we have with our animals — and they give it back!" says Drew, who cradled a cute canine pal as she stepped out to be honored at the ASPCA's 19th Annual Bergh Ball in NYC on April 14.

"I always say kindness is the greatest beauty that you can have."

1 1976 FEELING HER WAY
"Since childhood, I've always thought I was a little bit too sensitive for my own good," Andie admitted. "But I'd much rather be sensitive than dull."

2 1979 ELITE STATUS

Upon signing with NYC's Elite modeling agency, Andie "started working all the time." But she was on the lookout for more opportunities. "Being a model, you know it's a short-lived vocation."

GROWING UP in Gaffney, S.C., Rosalie Anderson MacDowell worked hard to overcome adversity, dealing with her parents' divorce and her mother's alcoholism. "As soon as I was old enough to work, I got a part-time job at McDonald's," Andie revealed. "More than anything, it gave me a sense of structure that was lacking in my home." But it's a structure that served her well as she became a model, actress and spokeswoman. "Somehow the universe was on my side, because everything connected, there was synchronicity," she noted. Today, Andie, who turned 58 on April 21, is "thankful for everything that's happened" in her life and career. "I have achieved so much already that now if I do anything it is for the sheer pleasure of it."

4 1989 PURE INSTINCT

After

Tarzan, Andie “got out of the hole” with a star turn in Sex, Lies, and Videotape. “[My character Ann] was from the South. That’s not hard for me. And I knew a lot of women like her. Women who were frigid. There was this thing in the South, it used to be that the purity of a woman was so important. [Ann] equated sex with not being pure.”

3 1984 GOING APE “I became a laughingstock,” shared Andie of her film debut Greystoke: The Legend of Tarzan, Lord of the Apes, in which her lines ended up being dubbed by Glenn Close. “I’m amazed that I managed to pick myself up and dust myself off.”

5 1993 SPECIAL DAY “I’ve had many happy periods in my life but the time I spent filming Groundhog Day [with Bill Murray] was really special,” she said. “There’s nothing cynical about that movie. It’s hopeful and soulful. It’s just great.”

6 1994 ALL FOUR IT

“They saw a lot of other people for the role,” revealed Andie about Four Weddings and a Funeral, with Hugh Grant. “I was quite impressed that I was the one who was, in fact, doing the movie!” More impressive? “[It] paid for me to sit back and take a year off, pay my mortgage.”

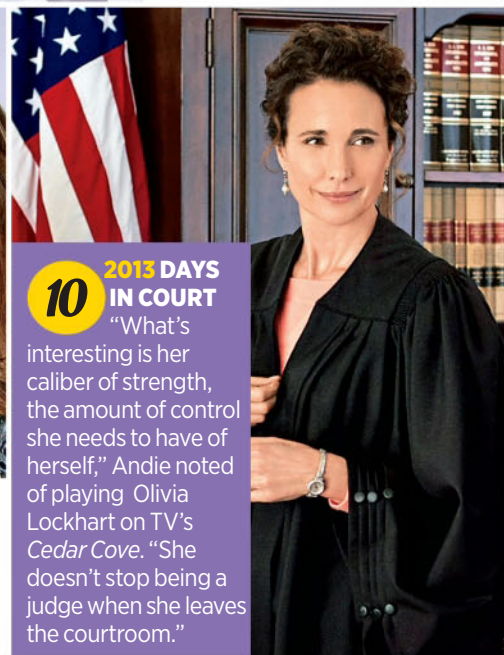

7 1996 HEAVEN-SENT Her work (on movies such as the angelic comedy Michael with John Travolta) gives Andie a sense she’s “doing what God meant for me.”

8 2005 NICE RIDE For Andie, the TV pic Riding the Bus With My Sister, with Rosie O'Donnell, was a “great” experience. “For Hallmark, it had a lot of edges. It wasn’t just sweet, which was nice.”

9 2009 A MOTHER'S NATURE “I tried my best to give our children the stable, loving home life I never had,” said Andie of son Justin and daughters Rainey and Margaret (from her first marriage to model Paul Qualley). “[They] without a doubt are my greatest accomplishment.”

10 2013 DAYS IN COURT “What’s interesting is her caliber of strength, the amount of control she needs to have of herself,” Andie noted of playing Olivia Lockhart on TV’s Cedar Cove. “She doesn’t stop being a judge when she leaves the courtroom.”

Ponchos

It's been more than 40 years since Susan Dey rocked a poncho on The Partridge Family, but this Age of Aquarius favorite is back in a big way! The price point, however, is a bit higher than it was back in the day. This Saint Laurent poncho, worn by actress Kate Beckinsale, retails for more than $2,000.

I lost 34 pounds in 21 weeks[‡] fast and saw the changes in my body each week—I felt a big difference in my mind as well. My clothing sizes started dropping and my fitting room experiences in the department store were astonishing. I left the fitting room feeling fit, attractive and powerful. I was wearing sizes and trying on clothing I had never worn in my life! I started the diet wearing a size 14 and finished the diet wearing a size 6. Size 6! That's a size that other people wore—Not me, until now! ”
